CHEA International Quality Group

Advancing the understanding of international quality issues is essential to promote high-quality higher education in today's competitive and internationalized world.

Launched in September 2012, the CHEA International Quality Group (CIQG) meets this need, serving as a valuable forum for colleges, universities, accrediting and quality assurance bodies, governments, associations, businesses, foundations and individuals worldwide to address issues, challenges and opportunities, all focused on academic quality.

This exciting venture brings together people, ideas and resources from around the world, engaging such issues as international quality expectations, rankings, new modes of educational delivery, government and quality, combating degree mills and more.

Members of the Quality Group receive benefits including:

- Quality International, the CIQG newsletter
- Policy Briefs
- Discounts on registration for CIQG and CHEA meetings
- Invitations to Webinars and other special activities
- Discounted rates for consultation services

Membership in the Quality Group is open to:

- Higher education institutions in the United States accredited by U.S. Department of Education- or CHEA-recognized accrediting organizations
- Higher education institutions from other countries in good standing with their national quality assurance bodies
- Higher education accreditation and quality assurance organizations sanctioned by government or other competent authorities
- Higher education associations
- Government agencies
- Businesses and corporations
- Foundations
- Individuals not employed by an institution or organization

Current CHEA institutional members automatically become members of the Quality Group.
